9:00 THE 1962 REITH LECTURES This Island Now

Each year, the BBC invites an acknowledged authority in a particular field to undertake some study or original research and to give listeners the results in a series of broadcasts. They are known as 'The Reith Lectures' after the BBC's first Director-General. This year's lectures are given by G. M. Carstairs, Professor of Psychological Medicine in the University of Edinburgh, and honorary director of a Medical Research Council unit which is concentrating on certain aspects of psychiatric illness. Examining contemporary British society from the viewpoint not of the economist or the politician but of the psychiatrist and anthropologist, Professor Carstairs particularly concerns himself with the inter-action of tradition, social environment and personality. He considers in biological terms and in the light of modern psychology and sociology what has happened to the British nation since the beginning of the century. This is the first time since their inception in 1948 that these lectures have been devoted to a subject of this nature. They are heard Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evening in this Folio. Tonight's topic is 'Stability and Change in Social Environment'. Feb. 6

9:30 ADDENDA TO THE REITH LECTURES A reading of two items from the London newspaper, the Sunday Observer, concerning the Reith Lectures given by Professor G. M. Carstairs. The first is a news report and the second is an article entitled 'What Would Lord Reith Say?' by Barbara Wootton, distinguished sociologist, author and ex-member of the BBC Board of Governors. SHOSTAKOVICH Concerto for Violin and Orchestra, Op. 99; Symphony No. 4, Op. 43

7:45 PHENOMENOLOGY William Earle, Professor of Philosophy at Northwestern University and author of Objectivity (Noonday) discusses Edmund Husserl (1859-1938). Professor Earle and Cecil Hemley, novelist, editor and critic, examine the views of the German epistemologist and their development in contemporary philosophy. Feb. 5

8:30 SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL The Tennent Production Company version of the play by Richard Brinsley Sheridan, directed by John Gielgud. The cast features Ralph Richardson, John Gielgud, Geraldine McEwan and Gwen Ffrangcon-Davies. This play ranks among the most brilliant successes in English theatrical literature. Though it lacks the poetic genius of Shakespeare, the nonsensical fantasy of Oscar Wilde, and the scholarly classical richness of Congreve, it reflects exactly the particular kind of society and manners in the London of the 1770's when it was written. The plot is founded on malice, simple wit and good nature — and reflects the morality and sentimentality of the time. Both Lady Teazle and Charles Surface are charming and reckless lighthearted characters — both are victims of their own rashness and both, by the time the play is over, promise to reform. (Command Records)

10:45 THE BARE FEET OF TEOTITIAN Photographer Nell Dorr reminisces about her conception of one of the few remaining primitive societies in the world. She is the author of The Bare Feet (N.Y. Graphic Society). Feb. 15

How to Harass Radio Station

The Senate Internal Security Subcommittee appears to be bent on harassment in its investigation of the Pacifica Foundation, the non-profit organization that relies on audience contributions to operate radio stations WBAI in New York; KPFA in San Francisco and KPFK in Los Angeles.

In opening the inquiry on Thursday Senator Thomas J. Dodd of Connecticut said that the subcommittee was not interested in knowing whether the programming of radio stations actually had come under Communist influence. Rather, he said, it would try to find out whether there had been "infiltration" which made such influence "possible." Under this bizarre criterion, the subcommittee is evidently asserting the right to inquire into the background and beliefs of everyone working for an organ of public opinion. In such an atmosphere the obvious consequence would be an environment in which many individuals might hesitate to speak their thoughts. Anticipatory censorship often can be far worse than blue penciling in the open.

The "reports" of possible infiltration of Pacifica followed the station's presentation of a disenchanted agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation who was critical of J. Edgar Hoover. However, Pacifica has included a Communist commentator, identified as such, among its many speakers of varying political hues.

But if Pacifica is guilty of untoward as distinct from unorthodox behavior in broadcasting, either in the matter of concealment of ownership or use of the airwaves for one-sidedly propagandistic purposes, ample remedies lie at hand under the established powers of the Federal Communications Commission.

On the basis of the only pertinent evidence—what it has actually broadcast over the air—Pacifica's worst sin appears to have been the dissemination of off-beat ideas that have angered some people and annoyed others. The subcommittee's inquiry looks like an attempt to make Pacifica conform to a concept of speech that is pleasing rather than free.

sional (sic.) Orientation', i.e. connotative meanings which — without fact or reason — we give to certain phrases. The title of the program comes from Hayakawa's contention that we talk too much; like a juke box we sound off whenever someone puts a dime in the slot. The talk was recorded in San Francisco and was based mainly upon chapters in Professor Hayakawa's book, Language in Thought and Action.

8:55 MISCELLANY

8:45 RICHARD II The Life and Death of King Richard II is a play in which the words themselves and the speaking of them are of the first importance. Much of the writing is formal, patterned and elaborate: verbal music, which cannot and will not be reduced to the bare notes of a prose tale. At the same time, it is a play of vivid action, youthful and headlong. In this BBC World Theatre production, produced by John Richmond, the words have been left as much as possible to speak for themselves, without much recourse to 'effects,' sparingly assisted by some admirable music by John Hotchkis. John Gielgud plays King Richard, Ralph Richardson is John of Gaunt. Feb. 13
